

ONLY FORTY-EIGHT HOURS REMAIN!

Two Days Left to Secure High Vote In This Race; Get All You Can Now!

FORTY-EIGHT HOURS LEFT!
Just forty-eight hours of the high vote schedule left! Saturday night at eight o'clock—not one minute later—marks the close of the first period in the Wm. Semmler Publications "Weekly Pay Check" subscription drive.

After that time, and for the next two weeks, the second period schedule of votes will be in effect, which means a material reduction in the voting power of all subscriptions; while the third and last period will see the scale of votes cut almost in half.

With but two short days remaining before the curtain falls forever on the first and high vote period of this wonderful, interesting and most liberal subscription campaign ever undertaken by a newspaper in this section of the state, leading workers are seething with a bustle of preparation for the final dash, and, with one accord are fighting valiantly and determinedly to reach the goal where the big prize automobile awaits.

A study of the standing of the "payrollers" at the present time, a record of which appears herewith, shows that some eight or ten are right in a bunch and going strong; straining every nerve and calling on every resource for aid, that they may be at the top of the list when the gong sounds the close of the first period and the death of the high vote at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

Mrs. Alma Brown, of Wolf Road, a hustler and who counts her friends by the hundreds, holds first position as we go to press Thursday evening. Close up to the leader and in second position is Miss Isabelle Waldvogel, of Frankfort. Miss Isabelle is a real go-getter and is well acquainted in the entire district covered by the Wm. Semmler newspapers.

Third place is held by Floyd Cooper of Orland Park; fourth by Dolores Walsh of New Lenox, fifth by George Price of Tinley Park and sixth by Mrs. Anton Benson of Mokena.

But look at the vote count in this issue and you will see that the standing from the very highest to the lowest is so small that any one of the workers can be in first position at the close of the first period, Saturday night at 8 o'clock. A FEW LONG TERM SUBSCRIPTIONS RIGHT NOW, TURNED IN TO THE CREDIT OF ANY OF THE WORKERS WOULD PUT THEM IN FIRST PLACE. WHO WILL BE IN THE LEAD AT THE CLOSE OF THE FIRST PERIOD? THAT'S THE ALL IMPORTANT QUESTION RIGHT NOW!

Speed Will Win
The crucial test is now at hand! If you intend doing anything big in this race DO IT NOW! Instead of being down in the list GET AT THE TOP AND STAY THERE! Now is the time to secure an unsurmountable reserve vote. Now is the time to make reasonably sure of the prize you most desire. Never again after this Saturday night will it be possible to secure the maximum number of votes on subscriptions. This is final and fair warning—don't fail to turn every available subscription to your credit before the close of the first period. AND DON'T FORGET THE WINNING OF THE GRAND CAPITAL PRIZE MEANS AN EARNING OF MORE THAN $200.00 A WEEK FOR THE NEXT THREE WEEKS WORK FOR SOME ONE IN THIS RACE.

HELP YOUR FAVORITE NOW!

The following is the standing of workers in the Wm. Semmler Publications "Weekly Payroll" Subscription Drive as we go to press Thursday evening. REMEMBER THE HIGH VOTE STOPS AT 8 O'CLOCK SATURDAY NIGHT—ONLY 48 HOURS. GIVE YOUR FAVORITE THAT PROMISED SUBSCRIPTION NOW:

Engine Bell Calls Worshippers To Coach Church

The railroad coach church at Lincoln Estates east of Frankfort is now in use as a Catholic church. A week ago Sunday about fifty Catholics stepped aboard a Rock Island passenger coach turned church, for the first mass in a new chapel car while an engine bell was ringing as a church bell.

Brought from Pueblo, Colo., the church car was hauled from the Mokena railroad station with the aid of a truck and is now permanently anchored along the Lincoln Highway in the Lincoln Estates.

Its regular seats removed and the red plush laid along the floor as a carpet, the traveling chapel received the engine bell to call the parishioners to worship, from the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railway.

More than a dozen families who previously had held services in their homes attend the new highway church. Rev. Albert Bruesserman of St. John's church of Joliet officiates every Sunday morning.

The church-coach has been named St. Wilfred's.

Old Orland Landmark Gone

An old Orland landmark has passed out of existence the past week when the old Wabash railroad engine house which has been in use for nearly fifty years, was torn down. The engine house was used mostly in winter time to house the engine of the suburban train which left Orland each morning for Chicago.

Connie Helenhouse was the hostler at the time and used to stay on the engine all night to keep up steam. With the discontinuance of the suburban service to Orland Park the old engine house was no longer used and was recently sold to David Agate who had the building torn down and the lumber hauled to his farm.

Mr. Royal Glahn of Orland was heard in a radio broadcast over station WAF Tuesday evening at five o'clock. The announcer stated that Mr. Glahn's parents were celebrating their 27th wedding anniversary Tuesday and their son Francis, Jr., was observing his first wedding anniversary the same day, so as a fitting tribute in song in honor of the two anniversaries, Royal sang "Oh Promise Me."

His musical offerings were very pleasingly rendered and were enjoyed by those who had the opportunity to tune in and hear them.

Mr. Glahn has been heard on a number of broadcasts and has also sung in some of the large Chicago churches.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. Theodore Haeefe of Mokena sang, "I Love You Truly".

At the appointed hour, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bridal party took their place in the living room of the home. The bride lovely in an eggshell moire satin crepe gown, with access ories to match, a hat trimmed with orchid colored flowers, carrying an arm bouquet of yellow rose buds, orchid sweet peas and gypsophila, entered on the arm of her father.

Mrs. Robert Fluck, sister of the groom was matron of honor. She wore a dark blue crepe gown with accessories to match and carried an arm bouquet of pink rose buds.

The groom was attended by the brother of the bride, Milton Woodrich. The Rev. Mr. Theo. Haeefe, pastor of St. John's Evangelical church of Mokena read the service.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was played at the close of the service, when congratulations were received. After this all departed to Joliet, where a reception and four course dinner was served in the Louis Joliet hotel, in the blue room.

The tables were decorated with orchid color candles, place cards and nut cups of the same color, the brides chosen color, and a large bowl of summer flowers. A large wedding cake graced the bridal table. Just the immediate families and Rev. and Mrs. Haeefe were present.

After the bridal couple had their pictures taken they departed for an extended trip to Texas and California.

Bedtime Story for Children

BILLY MINK WARNS BOBBY COON

FOR a long time Billy Mink and Bobby Coon sat gossiping on the edge of the Laughing Brook. Then Bobby, having finished what he had to eat, decided that he would go down the Laughing Brook to see what he could find. There's nothing Bobby Coon enjoys more than wandering along the Laughing Brook, watching for a little fish to carelessly come within reach, or just simply playing in the water. Bobby has almost as much curiosity as has Peter Rabbit. He simply has to examine everything which appears strange. A shiny pebble in the water or a shell will catch his eyes and he will stop to play with it.

Billy Mink watched Bobby start along down the Laughing Brook. "I wonder what he'll do when he comes to that little fence," thought Billy. So, to find out what Bobby would do, he followed him. When Bobby came to the little fence he sat down and stared at it in the funniest way. Then he began to talk to himself. "That's a funny thing," said he. "I wonder how that little fence happens to be here. I've never seen it before. I wonder what it's for. Nobody had any business to build a fence like that. The only way I can get around it is to climb way up that bank, and I don't want to do that." You know Bobby is rather lazy.

So, he sat and looked at the fence, which was made of sticks stuck down in the ground, and the more he looked the more determined he became that he wouldn't be stopped and that he wouldn't climb that bank. Of course it didn't take him long to discover that right in the middle of that fence was an opening, a sort of gateway. But it was a very narrow opening. You see, it had been made just wide enough for Billy Mink, and Bobby Coon is a great deal bigger than Billy Mink.

Bobby went a little nearer and once more sat down, his head cocked on one side as he studied that little opening. "It's too narrow for me, but if I try hard enough perhaps I can push those sticks aside and make it wider. That would be easier than climbing that steep bank," he said.

So Bobby walked a few steps nearer and again sat down. Somehow, he had an uncomfortable feeling that something was wrong. He didn't know why he had that feeling, but he had it. Now, whenever one of the little people of the Green Forest has that feeling he becomes very cautious. Bobby was tempted to try at once to push his way through that little opening, but because of that feeling that something was wrong he hesitated. Then very carefully he examined that little fence from the bottom of the steep bank clear to the edge of the water. He smelled of each separate stick of that fence, but he could smell nothing suspicious. Those were just plain old sticks and nothing else. Finally, he made up his mind that there couldn't be anything really wrong in at least trying to go through that little opening. He reached forward with one foot to place it right in the middle of that opening.

"Stop!" cried Billy Mink.

MOTHER'S
COOK BOOK

SOME TIMELY HINTS

WE ARE beginning to realize that "just a cold" is not always a simple thing. Many of the fatal illnesses are begun by a cold that has not been cared for intelligently or has been ignored.

During the spring when unseasonable weather or warm days cause carelessness, colds are most prevalent. A cold may, even after what seems a good recovery, leave the body weakened and thus open to serious complications and after effects. Staying in bed is one of the best remedies, drinking plenty of water and using citrus fruits freely. Nothing has yet been found that is better than the old remedy of hot lemonade, good warm cover, plenty of fresh air and a comfortable bed.

The following are a few recipes for various lemonades:

Hot Lemonade.

Take three tablespoons of lemon juice, three-fourths of a cupful of boiling water and honey to sweeten. This makes, with cold water and ice, the standard plain lemonade. This serves one; adding various spices and flavors gives a different lemonade.

One may slice the lemon, cover with boiling water, let stand ten minutes well covered, strain and serve sweetened to taste. This gives the flavor of the peel which is well liked.

Spiced Hot Lemonade.

Cut a lemon in two and cut a slice from each half. Extract the juice from the halves. Pour boiling water over the lemon slices, using one cup, add one-eighth teaspoon of ground cloves, one teaspoon of minced crystallized ginger and two cherries cut into halves. Add honey or sugar to sweeten.

Hot Grape Ade.

Combine the juice of one lemon with two tablespoons of grape juice, one cup of boiling water and sugar to taste.

Menus should be planned to keep the body in good health, full of pep and energy. Now with the markets full of the fresh fruits and vegetables they should be used very freely to avoid illnesses.

THIS IS GOOD-BY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THIS is good-by, and for a long, long while,
Not for an hour, not only for a day.
Yet I can laugh, and even you can smile,
Though you were always wiser, in a way.
And so farewell, and here's the casual kiss
Men give so often, even women do;
Yet something ever after we shall miss,
Miss till such things as hours and days are through.

This is good-by, and for a long, long time,
Not for a week, not for a month, or year.
Not soon my eager feet the stair shall climb,
Though you may wait, may wait in vain to hear.
Or I may come, may come and may not find,
Yet with a smile we wave, a smile we go.
At every parting heaven is always kind;
This is good-by—thank God we do not know.

COIN ON FOREHEAD

THIS is one of those puzzling little stunts that appear to be really magical when presented in off-hand fashion.

Borrowing a small coin, the magician sets it against the center of his forehead. The coin apparently becomes magnetized, for it adheres there.

Even though the performer tilts his head forward and shakes it from side to side, the coin does not fall. The magician finally removes the coin and gives it back to its owner.

It all depends upon the way you put the coin in place. Set it against your forehead and push the coin upward. This creates suction and the coin will stick firmly after you take your hand from it.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—I have received a letter from a reader in my home state of Missouri, propounding a very timely inquiry concerning the public debt of the United States.

It is timely for more than one reason. The United States government operates on a fiscal year running from July 1 to the next June 30 and we are, therefore, just about to close another fiscal year. A second reason why this inquiry is timely relates to the size of the present public debt, almost $32,000,000,000.

Our public debt has surged higher than normal during two periods of the last twenty years and the course of the debt, therefore, is one with which most mature persons are more or less familiar. But it remains as a fact that, while most people are informed concerning the total of the national debt, they have not had opportunity to learn exactly what it means to the individual.

Treasury transactions, as a whole, are rather difficult to understand and since the sums in which government figures now run are so huge, the general attitude of individuals is to let the thing pass as a matter for expert attention. It ought not to be so. The public debt is a matter of direct concern to every one of us and that is a further reason why the inquiry mentioned above is important.

I have often wondered whether individuals, in considering whatever obligations they have in the form of debt, take into account the fact that the public debt actually is a commitment against you and me and everyone else.

Persons who have not so thought of the public debt, probably will be shocked to learn that in addition to their obligations that have been contracted personally, there is something like $245 which, although an infinitesimal portion of the public debt, constitutes actually an individual obligation.

Therefore, when any person looks at that vague and shadowy term, "the public debt" in this light, they cannot help but realize that it has a very real and personal meaning to the individual. That enormous sum of nearly $32,000,000,000 must be paid off as any other debt and the government must collect it from everyone who lives in this country.

Again, the public debt may seem a thing far removed but it is brought home directly to each of us through the taxes we pay and in more ways than most of us care to admit we are contributing that tax. So, when the government contracts a debt and arranges to pay it off, the only way collection is possible for the extraordinary amount is by increasing the share of government expenses which each of us bears, meaning of course, an increase in our tax.

In 1857, the public debt was only $28,700,000. In that year, each person's share was only $1.01. With the advent of the Civil war, the government needed funds and began borrowing additional amounts until in 1866 the debt reached what in those days was a high figure—$2,750,000,000. At that time, each person's share was $77.69.

Good administration and sound financial policies followed and the debt was reduced, paid off, until during the early 1900's, the debt was reduced until each person's share was something less than $17.

Continual retrenchment was carried on until the World war interrupted the program and fresh borrowings were necessary for prosecution of that great conflict. The borrowing of the war days carried our public debt to a new high point of $26,594,000,000 on August 19, 1919.

The debt, because it was a new peak, looked insurmountable and it was dangerously high but through the administrations of Presidents Harding and Coolidge, the job of paying off the debt was seriously attacked and this program eventually resulted in reduction of the debt to about $16,500,000,000 during the administration of President Hoover.

It was from this low point that the present debt burden has mounted and continues to climb. The depression reduced government income from taxes and left the treasury with a deficit in two years of the Hoover regime.

The result of those deficits was to increase the public debt because money had to be borrowed to pay current running expenses. The borrowing did not appear serious, however, either in the last two years of the Hoover administration or the first year of the administration of President Roosevelt because Mr. Roosevelt had pledged the country during his campaign to economize in every direction. It was his promise that he would curtail expenditures by one-fourth and therefore make the outgo and income of the government approximately the same.

Instead of that course, Mr. Roosevelt initiated the present program of expenditures in huge amounts. The first plan called for the use of vast sums for expenditure by the government in the belief that the paying out of public money would revive industry and that industry, once on its feet, would again yield profit and that profit would in turn produce taxes for the government. Then came the public relief programs for which larger sums—to be exact, $3,500,000,000 in one year and $4,880,000,000 in another year—were appropriated and spent. Thus, we see in the last three years that the debt of the nation has grown from approximately $21,000,000,000 to approximately $32,000,000,000, and each person's share, as stated previously, is about $245.

Now, the figures here set out tell much more of a story than just that an enormous and incomprehensible number of dollars have been spent, millions of them needlessly. They tell more of a story, indeed, than just the fact that within another year there will have been approximately $3,000,000,000 more expended and that the debt then will have been increased something like $13,000,000,000 since the Roosevelt campaign of spending began.

To understand the situation in which the United States government and, therefore, the people, find themselves, it might be better to picture what would happen to an individual in the same circumstance. Hundreds of thousands of individuals are in debt but nearly all of them seriously try to avoid getting in debt beyond their capacity to pay off their obligations. If sickness or poor crops or poor business or any one of many other afflictions overtake that individual, even though his personal debts might be liquidated under normal conditions, he is—well, he just sinks.

Our government differs from that individual only in the fact that its citizens regard the government's credit as virtually limitless. It can continue to borrow and people will accept government bonds in exchange for their money for quite a while. But let us attempt to visualize in our mind's eye what would happen should our government be called upon to meet some extraordinary conditions that would be comparable to the loss of a job by the individual who is in debt.

Just how would our government meet the requirements of another war, for example? Just how would it be able to care for the destitute and the jobless, for another example, if our economic conditions would go into another tailspin and we would find ourselves in another depression? The answer seems fairly obvious.

So, I cannot help asking which is the wiser policy—to prepare for future emergencies or to indulge in reckless spending with no thought beyond the present?

It seems to me that the Roosevelt administration has followed the latter course on the optimistic base, entirely too optimistic it appears and has plunged this country too deeply into debt.

I do not mean to imply that government securities are not good any longer. Far from it. I maintain that as long as our money is any good, our government's bonds are good. Yet, it must be apparent to every thinking person that we cannot continue to spend at the rate that marks the last three years.

I prefer, as against the present spending policies, the policies of President Andrew Jackson, who fought always against excessive costs of government; who demanded consistently that the expense of government be raised regularly for each year's payments and that there be a little extra put away for the proverbial rainy day when the government was called upon for emergency payments. The policies of Andrew Jackson were so effective that during his administration in 1837, the public debt was wiped out and there was actually cash in the treasury besides.

Supporters of the present spending policies will say, of course, that the public debt of those days was in no way comparable to that of 1936. That is true but neither were the resources of the United States in those days comparable to the resources and the wealth producing capacity of the present-day United States. Likewise, the population of the United States in Andrew Jackson's term in the White House was only a mere handful compared to the nearly 130,000,000 of 1936.

So, answering the inquiry as to what the public debt means to the individual citizen, the answer must be a relation of the fact that his family's share as we start a new fiscal year in the government approximates $1,000. It means, further, that through one form of tax or another, that individual is helping to pay the interest of more than $710,000,000 every year. It means, in addition, that his government is in a position for the first time in the lives of most persons now living where it would face extreme difficulty were it called upon to defend our country in war or meet a fresh emergency like that through which we have been passing. Lastly, since government debts in the United States are held to be honorable debts and not to be repudiated, none of us can avoid commands from that government in the future to dig deeper and deeper in the old pocket for the payment of taxes.

Lesson for June 21

JESUS EXALTED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:36-53.
GOLDEN TEXT—Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name.—Philippians 2:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Goes Home to Heaven.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Goes Home to Heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Lord We Worship.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Exalted Christ and the Unfinished Task.

In order properly to view the ascension of Christ into heaven, it would be well to study his ministry during the forty days prior to his ascension.

I. The Walk of the Two Discouraged Disciples (vv. 13-15).

Emmaus was seven and a half miles northwest of Jerusalem. Just why these disciples were walking this way we do not surely know. Perhaps their home was there. Or they were merely walking to seek relief from their stunning sorrow. If they had believed what Jesus had told them about his death and resurrection, they would have escaped this great disappointment. Unbelief causes many heartaches and disappointments. The topic of conversation was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. So little had his teaching about the resurrection impressed the disciples that the reports which the women brought were as idle tales to them.

II. The Unrecognized Companion (vv. 16-24).

1. Who he was (v. 15). While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the last few days, Jesus joined them. When he questioned them concerning their sadness they did not recognize him. How often we are so engrossed with our sorrows and disappointments that we fail to recognize Jesus, even though he is walking by our side.

2. His question (v. 17). Perceiving their sadness and perplexities, he sought to help by calling forth a statement of their grief.

3. Their answer (v. 18). His questions so surprised them that they jumped to the conclusion that he was a stranger in Jerusalem. The condemnation and crucifixion of the great prophet of Nazareth were so recent and notorious that no one who had lived in Jerusalem could be ignorant of them.

III. The Scriptures Opened (vv. 25-31).

1. His rebuke (vv. 25-30). He did not rebuke them for not believing the strange stories that they had heard, but for ignorance of and lack of confidence in the Old Testament Scriptures. They had only accepted such parts of the Old Testament as suited their notions. The very center and heart of the Old Testament Scriptures set forth the death and resurrection of Christ. Ignorance of the Scriptures and unbelief as to the wonders and complete redemption wrought by Christ robs us of many joys and deprives us of power as workers for Christ.

2. Jesus Recognized (vv. 31-35). While sitting at meat with the disciples, their eyes were opened as they saw him bless the bread and distribute it to them. We too can see the Lord on such common occasions as eating, buying, selling, and in our recreations, for he has promised his abiding presence. They were so filled with joy over this revelation of the Savior that they hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the other disciples of his resurrection.

IV. Jesus Stands in the Midst of the Eleven (vv. 36-47).

1. He said, "Peace be unto you" (vv. 36, 37).

However, they were terrified and frightened. Sinful man in the presence of a holy God is ill at ease.

2. He showed them his hands and his feet (vv. 38-40). In order to convince them of his personal identity, he gave them tangible evidence that he was not a mere spirit.

3. He ate before them (vv. 41-45).

4. He commissioned them to evangelize the world (vv. 46-49). They were to testify concerning his shed blood and resurrection, and on this ground they were to preach repentance and remission of sins to all nations.

5. Jesus ascends into heaven (vv. 50-53).

Having given them the parting message to evangelize the world he ascended into heaven. From his place in heaven he continues to carry on his work through his disciples as they are energized by the Holy Ghost. Just as we treasure the last words of our departed loved ones so we should ponder this farewell message of our Lord.

Magnet of Thankfulness

The unthankful heart, like my finger in the sand, discovers no mercies; but let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so will it find in every hour some heavenly blessings, only the iron in God's sand is gold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Earth holds heaven in the bud; our perfection there has to be developed out of our imperfection here.—C. Rossett.

Minister's Son Invents Invisible Ear Drum

The Invisible Ear Drum invented by A. O. Leonard, a son of the late Rev. A. B. Leonard, D.D., for many years secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for his own relief from extreme deafness and head noises, has so greatly improved his hearing that he can join in any ordinary conversation, go to the theatre and hear without difficulty. Inexpensive and has proved a blessing to many people. Write for booklet to A. O. Leonard, Inc., Suite 202, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City. Advt.

ORLAND PARK

Mrs. Harold Kinney, chairman of the American Home department of the Orland Park Woman's Club, attended a lawn luncheon last Friday given by Mrs. Otto Schmidt on her lawn in Palos Park, for the outgoing third district chairman of that department, Mrs. Donald DeMuth.

Mrs. F. B. Stael, state chairman, teaposed Mr. S. DeMuth with a silver teapot as a gift from all the district chairmen of that department.

A high point in the lives of two of our Alpine boys was reached on the night of June 10th, was during a pleasant little commencement program, Jay Wilson and Donald Doctor received their 8th grade diplomas from the hand of Assistant Superintendent of schools, Catherine McClaughry.

These boys have an outstanding record in other directions. They were each awarded an Achievement diploma signifying the completion of 16 year-units of school home project work.

Jay Wilson also received a certificate of perfect attendance for the fourth consecutive year, an outstanding record for a Rural school child. Donald Doctor received a similar certificate for the fifth time in his school life. Certificates of attendance for this year were also awarded to Harold Sayers and Dolores Doctor.

Miss McClaughry in a pleasing little address attributed this good attendance record to well organized and properly managed homes co-operating with the school for the ultimate good of the child.

TO DISCUSS NEW SOIL PROGRAM AT LOCAL MEETINGS.

Now that I have filed my work sheet, what can I do to perform under the provisions of the new Soil Conservation Program?

Answers to this and many other questions which farmers are asking will be given during a series of five community meetings to be held in Cook County, starting next week, Tuesday evening, June 23, it was announced by Farm Adviser O. C. Barrett.

County and community committee members will have charge of the meetings which will be held as follows:

June 23—Tuesday, Harz Blacksmith Shop; Butternut Corners at 8 p. m.

June 24—Wednesday, Town Hall, South Holland at 8 p. m.

June 25—Thursday, Creer's Hall, Orland at 2 p. m.

June 26—Friday, Farm Bureau Hall, 2414 West Grove street, Blue Island, at 8 p. m.

June 26—Friday, Arlington Heights Village Hall, at 8 p. m.

All the above meetings on Eastern standard time.

Our Cook County farmers still have time to make adjustments in many cases where their soil depletion acreage exceeds the bases allotted to them, Mr. Barrett reports.

The purpose of these meetings will be to point out the simplest method of making these adjustments and explain to the individual farmer how the program fits him and his needs.

Those in attendance will also be given the opportunity to discuss these farm practices which will enable them to meet future performance requirements and at the same time improve and conserve the fertility of their soils. Soils can be used and fertility taken from them and yet conserve, provided the right farming practices are followed, Mr. Barrett pointed out. The concerted action of farmers result in increasing farm income far in excess of any performance or payments.

The meetings scheduled as noted above are designed to help all our farmers to understand fully the provisions that they may profit thereby.

One former in the office of the Farm Bureau recently stated quite conclusively that he could not "Get in" on the program. After just a little analysis it was observed that he seeded clover in his oats last year and that his soil depletion base had already been reduced to the extent of the seeding and that he had already unknowingly put himself in a position to receive about one-half of his full adjustment payment.

There are many others in the country like him. I can hardly see a single case where our farmers in the county cannot advantageously enter into the program, says Mr. Barrett.

We held our regular meeting on June 12th, our first vice president, Mrs. Freitag presiding in the chair. Mrs. Swisher, our president, is vacationing in Canada. The election of new officers which was scheduled for this meeting was postponed until the meeting of June 26th.

Rehabilitation chairman, Mrs. Freitag, gave a report on the party given the Orland boys. Cards and buncos were played, and a good time was had. A silk stocking drive is on for the meeting of July 10th. The one bringing the most pairs of old silk stockings will be rewarded.

Child Welfare chairman, Mrs. Baldwin, reminded the members that the annual pilgrimage to Normal will again be made on Sunday, June 21st. It is hoped as many members as possible will be able to go to help make these children happy on this day.

Mrs. West, Americanism chairman read an interesting article entitled "The Oldest Flag."

As June is the month of "Fidac" Mrs. Rowden put on a very interesting program, after which we were served Polish refreshments, inasmuch as Poland is the country under study this year.

After quite a lengthy discussion we moved not to rent a booth at the carnival, but to take part in the parade on July 5th.

TINLEY PARK

OBITUARY

Mrs. Sadie C. Ruggles Scheer, wife of the late Dr. Con. S., passed peacefully away in the early morning of June 3, 1936, after a lingering illness of five years. She was born in Frankfort Township and taught school in that vicinity, more or less, until she married Dr. Scheer in July, 1894, when she came to live with him in Tinley Park, where he had established himself as a dentist.

Mrs. Scheer was a lady of culture of aesthetic nature and of splendid Christian character. She loved the beautiful and finer things of life, arts and good literature and gave much of her time to music, not only in gratification of herself, but in teaching others this fine art.

As a Christian she led an exemplary life. She was kind and considerate of all. She never passed judgment upon, never proclaimed faults of people and always found something good in those with whom she came in contact.

She gave much of her time and energy to the work of their little church, the Methodist Episcopal church of Tinley Park. For years she was at various times Ladies' Aid President, or Sunday School Superintendent, or teacher and she also served as organist.

Being particularly qualified for this work she was very much liked and successful and she did much to influence others to strive toward achieving the high goal of Christian living. In this work her good husband gave her his unstinted support, attending all services and activities of the church regularly with her and also as janitor for many years, besides giving liberally in a financial way. By their deaths this church has suffered a great loss.

Five years ago Mrs. Scheer was stricken with paralysis and was since that time confined to her bed. In these trying years she gave continued evidence of her Christian character and experience. She was always cheerful, bearing her affliction with fortitude and trusting in God her heavenly father, through Jesus Christ her Saviour in whom she implicitly believed.

She experienced her greatest and hardest affliction, when her husband who had so patiently and tenderly nursed her and upon whom she depended solely, was suddenly taken from her, a little over a year ago, by the hand of death, but amidst it all her faith and trust in God sustained and kept her.

During these fifteen months since her husband's passing, she was tenderly nursed by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Val Scheer with the able assistance of her niece Miss Evelyn Erickson. She deeply and gratefully appreciated their kind ministrations, conscious of the fact that their burden was lightened by their warm love for her.

She leaves to mourn her departure two sisters, Mrs. Mervin of Joliet, Ill., and Mrs. Gilbert, who resides in Texas and other relatives and many friends. She shall be lovingly remembered by all who knew her for the sunshine and benediction of her life and of her we can truly say in the words of the poet:

"Life's labor done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies,
While heaven and earth combine to say,
'How blest the righteous when he dies'."

Do you ever face problems and decisions which seem to you to be particularly your own? Have you ever felt that you were the only person in all the world who had such a hard time making choices among several alternatives? Does your peculiar struggle and temptation seem altogether different, and more severe, than those of other people?

Have you often wondered how the great souls of the race have met and dealt with their most perplexing questions of conduct and character?

These are some questions which from time to time confront every thoughtful person. No one who has any desire to live life deeply and richly can escape them. Next Sunday morning, as we continue our interpretation of the life of Jesus, we shall seek to discover how he met the temptations of life as they are dramatically set forth in Luke 4 and Matthew 4. We would suggest that you read these two chapters this week in preparation for our service of worship and meditation

next Sunday morning.

Last Sunday some questions were turned in to the minister, and he will attempt to answer them from the pulpit next Sunday. You are encouraged to write out and bring in any questions you would like to hear discussed. Just now we suggest that they be questions growing out of our study of the life of Jesus.

You will discover, we believe, that an hour or two spent in public worship each Sunday morning will provide a greatly needed experience of refreshments and restoration for tired bodies and minds. Will you not make a place for such worship weekly.

"CURIOUS! I ALWAYS THOUGHT OF SILENT ELECTROLUX OPERATION
SIMPLY AS A CONVENIENCE"

NOW I KNOW

IT'S FAR MORE THAN THAT

... it's constant proof of the utterly different method of Electrolux operation--no machinery at all! Good reason why only Electrolux can offer all these big advantages:

- (1) No moving parts to wear
- (2) Lasting efficiency
- (3) Continued low operating cost
- (4) Fullest food protection
- (5) Savings that pay for it

A TINY GAS BURNER takes the place of all moving parts in Electrolux. And this simpler, more efficient operation makes possible not only the permanent silence, but also the long, low-cost service of Electrolux. Owners find that Electrolux actually saves enough on refrigerating cost and on food bills to pay for itself.

Electrolux has already been the choice for more than half a million American homes the country over. Each year, it wins a larger percentage of all refrigerator sales because it offers so much more. See the new 1936 models on display at our showroom. Ask us about our liberal purchase plan. Come in!

Suggests Effective Name For Coming Republican Rally

Mr. Justus L. Johnson of Aurora, a member of the Illinois State Central Committee has suggested a very effective name for the Republican rally which is to be held in the Downers Grove Forest Preserve on June 19 at 8 p. m. DST. He has proposed the name "Republican Ratification Rally", and the suggestion has been adopted by the Downers Grove Committee which is in charge of the arrangements. The name has been well chosen and should prove to be a catchword as effective as the famous "Grass Roots" Convention of last spring.

The rally will in effect, ratify the Republican principles which were adopted at the national convention in Cleveland, Otis F. Glenn, C. Wayland Brooks, Chas. W. Hadley will be present. They will have messages which will arouse the enthusiasm of voters throughout the state. They will in effect be firing the opening guns of the coming campaign in November. American citizens should not continue tolerating a condition whereby all their freedom is sold for a piece of bread and a few paltry dollars.

The committee urges all citizens within a radius of 150 miles of Downers Grove to come out and show by their presence that they are for the party which is pledged to safeguard our Republican form of government by keeping the constitution intact.

HUSTLE!

HUSTLE IS THE KEY that will unlock the treasure chest, so filled with magnificent prizes, by far the most valuable ever offered by a newspaper in this section of the state, in recognition enterprise and action. Never before has there been such a glittering array of gifts presented, and never before was there such a tremendous battle waged to win them. Present indications point to a hair-breath finish, and, while it is reasonably certain the winning votes will run into large figures, it is an assured fact that the grand capital prize will be won by a very narrow margin.

The guest list included all pupils taught by Mrs. Cappel who live in and around Mokena. About seventy-five guests were present, and also the members of the school board and their wives.

The auditorium was transformed into a garden, with gliders, shrubbery and Japanese lanterns. It was a complete surprise to the honored guest.

Games were played, dainty refreshments consisting of punch and cup cakes were served after which dancing was enjoyed.

An occasional chair was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Cappel, a gift from all those present.

Mr. and Mrs. Cappel were married last January 4th in New Hampton, Iowa.

Mrs. Cappel has been a teacher in the Mokena public school for the past six years. Their many friends extend to them wishes for many years of happiness, health and prosperity.

Miss Sippel and Miss Moriarty wish to thank all who lent articles or donated decorations for this party.

Young People Will Meet

There will be a great gathering of young people in the Moody Memorial church auditorium, June 23 at 8 o'clock in the evening under the auspices of the Chicago Young People's Evangelistic Campaign organization. Four thousand young people are expected.

The speaker of the evening will be Rev. D. E. Hart-Davies, M. A., D. D. of St. Thomas church, Edinburgh, Scotland. It will be in the role of archeologist that he will present his message to the young people of this territory. For years he has been a painstaking student of historic stones unearthed by expeditions digging in the east. How these stones confirm and prove the record of the scriptures has been his serious concern, and the subject of his address on June 23 will be "The Bible, in the Light of Science and Archeological Discovery."

Stereopticon slides will also be shown, the subject of which will be, "From The Garden of Eden to The Tomb of Tutankhamen."

The Moody church, the City's largest church auditorium, is at Clark & La Salle street, near North Avenue.

Homerding Shuts Out Orland Park; Gets 18 Strikeouts

Frankfort Township base ball fans were treated to a "humdinger" ball game last Sunday at Frankfort field. The Township team started after Ludwig's slants in the first inning and scored three runs. From then on the game was a sweet pitching duel between Homerding, ace of the Frankfort Township team and Ludwig, star pitcher of the Orland Park Three-Stars. Eight men were struck out by Ludwig and believe it or not, eighteen were fanned by Homerding. The score would have probably been larger but for the excellent pitching of Ludwig in the pinches when the Township boys had men on the bases.

Homerding had Orland hog-tied and handcuffed, during the entire game, allowing only four scattered hits, thereby getting revenge on Orland for an early season practice game defeat. Eighteen strike-outs ought to win a game in any league, and if the hitting picks up to where it ought to be the Township's opponents are going to have a tough fight winning any games. When interviewed after the game Pat said that he was just getting started and expects to pitch many games of this calibre during the season.

A large crowd of enthusiastic baseball bugs attended the game and all enjoyed the good showing of both teams.

Next Sunday the Frankfort Township team will play the Chicago Heights Hornets at the Picnic Grove north of Frankfort. This game is one of the features of V. F. W. picnic. All fans are invited. Game starts at 1 p. m. Let's go!

Sunshine 4-H Club

On June 9 at 8 o'clock in the morning, Hilda Stelter, Wilma Meyer and Bernilda Stuckey accompanied by Mr. Glover, assistant farm advisor of Cook County, started on their way to the fourteenth annual tour of the University of Illinois. Seven other 4-H girls met them at Chicago Heights and the trip then made in two cars.

They arrived at Urbana at 11 o'clock, registered and found sleeping quarters for all ten girls in the same boarding house where they spent the following two night. Over 4000 club members and leaders registered.

Sessions had been arranged for most of the time during the three days, June 9, 10 and 11, to which the members attended at will.

Some of the best features of the programs were the recognitions of counties scoring highest in club work; the music and stunt festival; demonstration on the uses of cheese; picnic supper and lawn party; travel movies and scenes from the play, "Taming of the Shrew."

The girls returned home Thursday, having had a wonderful time. They feel that the trip was very worth while and hope that other club members will have the same opportunity next year.

The next club meeting will be held June 18 with Hilda Stelter.

Tinley Defeats Midlothian 7-5

After losing the last two ball games Tinley Park traveled to Midlothian to take picks on the Tigers last Sunday and defeated them by a score of 7 to 5. Fiebig started for Tinley but tired in the 6th inning and was relieved by Kramer in the seventh, who struck out 8 of the next ten men that faced him. The game started out like it was going to be a slam-bang affair and the score might have been different if it had not been for Weise in left field who backed up in the apple trees to pull down two long drives that were tagged for doubles.

Johnson did not look so good in his first two times at bat when he struck-out, but in the seventh inning with a couple of his team-mates on base he sent the ball over the center-fielders head for two bases driving in two runs which proved to be enough for Tinley to win.

Next Sunday, June 21st, Tinley will play at Palos Park, and from good information we understand that there has been a big shake-up in the Palos line-up. They have turned back the pages of history and strengthened the team with some of the boys who made the game interesting in the younger days. Well we shall see what the records say. "Can They Come Back"? The game time is 3 p. m.

"Wasting my time," Barry told Harwood, the next morning, in the city editor's busy office at The Globe. "My time, and nearly a hundred dollars of the paper's money. Winslow had it straight. The Fane girl was strutting her stuff from one o'clock until long after the murder."

"Well, it's good to be sure."
"Yes, and I'm mighty sure now. Every step I've taken since our last meeting leads right up to Mrs. Kelly."
Harwood looked at him quizzically. "Step No. 1?" he asked.
"My advertisement offering a reward for the number of the cab that killed that artist's wife."
"You don't mean that you got it?"
Triumphantly, Barry opened his note book.

"There it is," he said. "026017. The figures under it are the number of the driver who gave me the information."
Ernie copied both numbers.

"Well, work," he commented. "Anything else?"

"Lots. This fellow had a passenger who got out at Twenty-third street around midnight. When the woman was killed—two hours later—the driver bumped into him again in Sixteenth street, very much rattled, and looking as though he'd committed a murder."

"Any description?"
"Rather a vague one. That doesn't matter. I'm sure, in my own mind, that this passenger was the caller Kelly expected, and that he wasn't the murderer. I'm equally sure that he knew murder had been committed."

"Let's call it a mere supposition. In that case, Kelly was killed around two o'clock. At two o'clock, Mrs. Kelly wasn't in Harlem."

"How do you know that?"
Barry's answer was a full report of his adventures of Saturday. "Without Step No. 1, Step No. 2 means nothing. In other words, if Kelly'd been killed at midnight—which is the theory everyone's worked on—Mrs. Kelly's alibi would have been holeproof."

Harwood joined his finger-tips in an almost prayerful gesture. "I wish we could find the guy who looked 'as though he'd committed a murder.'"

Barry made no reply.
"That's always the trouble," the city editor went on. "What kind of a skate is this Luis Morano? Tough?"

"On the contrary. Cries over a mammy song."

"There's a heap of 'em do," Harwood philosophized.

"He's a Southerner, with a soft voice, and a funny impediment in his speech?"

"That so?" Harwood inquired.

"Where is this Cocoanut Bar?"

Barry told him, and promptly returned to Mrs. Kelly. "How the deuce are we going to prove what she did after she got home?"

"That's up to you," Ernie said. "I'm off on a new tack now." His eyes twinkled. "One that would go a long way toward establishing your theory of coincidence. Gosh, I'd give my two uppers to break this story within the next week or two."

Thursday evening, Barry spent in his room, mostly thinking. He had telephoned Pat twice since their luncheon together, and found her enthusiastic over her guests. "There's nothing wrong with the boy," she declared; "nothing that a few weeks out here won't cure. He's on the beach now, with his mother."

Judge Hamblidge had taken to the little fellow at once. Almost like having a grandchild. It kept his mind off his worries. And no one could see Peggy, being brave, but always staring at nothing, always thinking of what might happen, without pity that warmed into affection. "She's really an awfully good sort," Pat said, from Southampton. "I like her a lot. When are you coming out?"

"Tomorrow, I hope."

"Well, we'll expect you for dinner." That breach was healed, all right. Pat had called him "the scum of the earth." In the same hour, he remembered again, he had told her he loved her. As to that, she still maintained silence. "That's the kindest thing she could do," Barry thought. "A Judge's daughter, and I—"

Barry had learned not to think of the future. "Nor heed the rumble of a distant drum," as his own father had put it. Just for now, it was pleasant to be somebody who knew Pat—and he wanted to take that awful look out of the other girl's eyes. "That oughtn't to be hard now," Barry thought. "If I could get that Filipino to talk. He knows when Mrs. Kelly came home, and he's probably got a darned good idea what she did afterward. If we could get to that Oriental—"

At which point, Evans came, and he had been drinking.

"Sorry, sir," he apologized, taking the nearest chair. Evans had none of Willetts' compunctions. "Sorry, sir, but I've been having dinner with Kelly's chauffeur."

"Liquid nourishment?"
"Yes, sir," Evans admitted, sheepishly. "But that was the only chance I had with that Irishman."

"Well?"

"Well, I drove Miss Hamblidge, and Mrs. Rogers, and the boy to Southampton, like you said. And I started back today. It was nearly eight when I made the garage, and I was good and hungry."

"There's a decent cafe a few yards away—that's Kelly's chauffeur—was sitting at a table, with a load he ought to've gone twice for," Evans smiled.

"Ed had a grudge on women in general. And he was chomped plenty. I hadn't been with him long when he opened up to Mrs. Kelly. There's something queer between her and this Filipino, he says."

"Charlie?"

"That isn't his name, but let it go at that. And, when Ed said 'queer,' he didn't mean anything wrong. Just some kind of an understanding. Mrs. Kelly's been giving the Chink coin and jewelry, regular. Charlie showed him some of it, Ed says."

"Well, the night of the murder Nolan drives Kelly to the Cocoanut Bar. And home—at nine o'clock. When he gets out at his house, Kelly says, 'Put the car in the garage. Mrs. Kelly's gone up to Harlem, and I won't need you 'til tomorrow morning.'"

"Ed obeys orders. He goes back to Kelly's, and sits in the kitchen. This Chink is in the butler's pantry, getting a tray ready. And, while the two of 'em are down there, the damnedest row starts upstairs—"

"Rogers and Kelly."

"No. This was around nine o'clock. Mrs. Kelly. She was laying Mike out so you could have heard it a block.

Ernie Copied Both Numbers.

Well, this goes on for ten or fifteen minutes, and then the bell from the parlor rings. Charlie starts upstairs with the tray. He gets up two steps, when Kelly appears at the head of the flight. "Come up here, you lousy spy. Come up here while I tell you where you get off!"

"Charlie sets down the tray, and goes. Nolan follows into the pantry, and has a stiff drink. Then he sits down again, and listens to Kelly laying out the Chink."

"Could he hear anything? Words, I mean?"

"No. Just Kelly's voice. Mrs. Kelly was out of it. She'd gone to her room, Nolan thinks. But Kelly made noise enough for two. And, after another ten minutes or so, Charlie comes back."

"I'm fired," Charlie says—in the Chink lingo. "I got to get out. That blankety-blank told me to go quick, or he'd kill me."

"Are you going?" Nolan asks.

"Sure," the Chink says. "I got to get my money first. He chased me out of the room when I asked for it, but I'm going back," the Chink says.

"Nolan then took the cook to a movie, and when they get back, everything's quiet. It's after midnight, because these two walked home. Kelly's upstairs, talking to somebody, and the Chink's in his room, packing and muttering to himself something frightful. So Nolan says good night to the cook, who goes into her room, and then Nolan slips into the pantry, and takes another shot of that hooch."

"What hooch?"

"The rye whiskey I was telling you about."

Barry sprang from his chair.

"The rye whiskey?"

"Sure. And it was in a cut-glass decanter."

"Are you certain?"

"Nolan is. And he's just as certain that it was still in the pantry when the guy upstairs left."

"Why?"

"Because he heard the front door close ten seconds before he went out the back way."

"Gosh!" Barry exclaimed. "That puts it up to Mrs. Kelly, all right." Evans shook his head, drunkenly.

"Mrs. Kelly wasn't home," he said. "She went to her sister's after the high-jinks in Harlem, and Nolan got her there the next morning, before they called the police. There were only three people in that house after the guy went who was visiting Kelly—Kelly himself, cook, and a mighty mad Chinaman."

"Whatever he was, he was mad, and the decanter that killed Kelly was downstairs with him until just about the time Kelly was killed."

"Thanks," Barry nodded. "I think we've got something."

"Oh, I forgot to give you this. It came to Southampton—just as I was leaving," said Evans.

"This" was a cablegram. Alone, in the smoke-filled room, Barry opened it. Nine words. "Father and I sailing for home Sunday. Love. Mother."

For an instant, he stood, frozen, the wire in his hand.

Directly before him, an evening newspaper lay open on the table.

"Out-going passenger and mail ships," he read. "Sailing tomorrow—Steamship Oranje Nassau. For Port-au-Prince, La Guayra, Curacao, Maracaibo, Carupano, and Pampatar. I'm on my way to one of 'em tomorrow!"

CHAPTER IX

Barry's panic was short-lived.

Between him and the sailing list had come a vision of Peggy, with beaded lashes screening eyes forever staring at nothing.

"I can't do it," he said to himself. "I can't run away and leave that girl in the lurch. Nor Pat either. I've tackled this job, and I've got to go through with it."

"Anyway, it begins to look as though the end were in sight. If Ridder sails Sunday—"

He went back to the shipping news. "If Ridder sails Sunday, that's the Bremen and she's due here the following Saturday. That gives us eight days. I'd better see Winslow."

He called Peter next morning, but the attorney was in the country. "Left last night," his secretary reported, "and won't be back until Monday."

Barry had a dinner engagement at Southampton. "We'll start things humming on Monday," Barry told himself. "I've got my house to put in order, too. Ridder's house, that is."

Evans telephoned around ten, and before noon they were on their way to Southampton. "My last week-end with Pat," he was thinking. "Where'll I be next Saturday? Out of luck, and out of a job. In jail, maybe, and in the newspapers. That's my finish with—everybody."

There was a new atmosphere at the Hamblidge's. Pat had been right in telling Jack that he'd "cheer my father up a lot." "They're building a railway on the beach," she laughed, when the boy—sunburned, and active—joined them before dinner.

"You must go to bed now," Pat bade him. "If we're to take our ride in the morning. We have a canter every day before breakfast," she added to Barry, ringing for a maid to take charge of the youngster. "I discovered the dearest little pony in the village, and the man brings it over at nine o'clock, with another horse for me. Jack's getting to be a regular Buffalo Bill."

The strained expression of a week ago was beginning to disappear from the face of Judge Hamblidge. But the greatest difference was in the boy's mother. Naturally imitative, as Barry had remarked, she had been quick to observe and emulate Pat's moderation with make-up. Her speech, too, had lost all but an occasional inadvertent reference to "guys" and "dames." She had stopped staring into space. "What's the news about Jack?" she asked, quite calmly.

"Free next week," Barry declared ringingly.

At the dinner table, in spite of herself, Peg caught some of the contagion of Barry's new confidence. Nolan's story sounded like the solution of everything, they agreed. "We've got to get Jack out before Saturday," Barry said. "His father'll be home then."

Both women looked up at him.

"What'll happen to you?" Peggy asked.

"The main question," Barry urged, "is what's going to happen to Peg. And Jack. And Jacky."

"We'll meet that when it comes," Peggy returned, steadily. "But now I'm worried about you."

She excused herself early, with the plain purpose of leaving Barry with Pat. But the Judge stayed on. His legally trained mind had been busy with the Nolan disclosures.

"If Mrs. Kelly slept at her sister's, why didn't she say so to you? It would've been her best alibi."

"Yes, but it would have involved admitting that she'd had a run-in with Kelly."

"That's true," Hamblidge admitted. "But Nolan was drunk last night, you say. And some parts of his story simply don't hold water. I don't believe there was anything 'queer' between Mrs. Kelly and the Filipino. Kelly's finding that out wouldn't account for his calling the man a 'lousy spy,' would it?"

"No," Barry retorted. "But listen. If the Chink was a 'lousy spy,' he got paid for it, didn't he? Wouldn't that explain Mrs. Kelly's giving him 'coin and jewelry'? And everything else? The Chink's reporting Betty Barclay's message, and all the rest of it? I tell you, this story's as straight as a string. Betty Barclay went on the road with her show about the time Mrs. Kelly sued for divorce. I found that out some time ago. She got back the day of the murder, and phoned Kelly. Mrs. Kelly learned of that from the Chink, and lit into Mike. Then Mike lit into the Chink, and the Chink killed him. I think we can prove that."

The Judge shook his head.

"Anyway, it certainly establishes reasonable doubt of Jack's guilt."

"They can't convict Jack," the Judge insisted. "Peter says so, and I've never known Peter to be wrong when he made an assertion like that. But acquittal means waiting for the trial, and waiting for the trial means that Jack will still be in jail when his father returns."

Pat remained silent, but, the next morning, on the beach, she drew Barry away from the little group engaged in railroad construction.

IT'S TIME TO PLAN SEASON'S CANNING; VARIOUS METHODS

With Mother Nature bursting into bloom, filling the earth with warm sunshine and growing vegetation, we know it is time to plan the season's canning and give some thought to canning methods.

"Open kettle" canning is recommended only for fruits, tomatoes, preserves, relishes, etc., and only one jar must be filled at a time with the boiling product, and then sealed immediately. The "hot" or "cold pack" method simply means that the product is cooked directly in the jars. For "hot pack" food is precooked a short period of time and then packed hot into the jars. For "cold pack" food is pre-cooked, then cold-dipped and packed into jars, or packed right in the jars cold without precooking.

The product for canning should be carefully selected and thoroughly cleaned. Small fruits and berries are usually packed into the jars raw, a hot sirup added to within one and one-half inches of the top, caps adjusted, and the jars processed. Vegetables are precooked for a few minutes and packed into the jars while hot, the caps adjusted and the filled

Close Observation

IT IS the close observation of little things which is the secret of success in business, in art, in science, and in every pursuit in life. Human knowledge is but an accumulation of small facts, made by successive generations of men—the little bits of knowledge and experience carefully treasured up and growing at length into a mighty pyramid.—Samuel Smiles.

A good name lost is seldom regained.—When character is gone, all is gone, and one of the richest jewels of life is lost forever.—J. Hawes.

jars gotten into the canner immediately for processing.

It is also important to know how to handle the type of jar cap that you are using correctly. For the self-sealing cap, which consists of screw band and lid, place lid on the jar with sealing composition next to the glass, and screw the band firmly tight. Because this cap does not seal until the contents of the jar are cold, the self-sealing cap is always tightened down firmly before the jars are placed in the canner to process. At the end of the processing period the jars with the self-sealing caps are removed from the canner and set right side up to cool. There is no further tightening of the cap. Twenty-four hours after the canning is done the screw band may be removed and jars stored away.

When using the zinc top jars, jars are only partly sealed before placing in the cooker, and processed immediately. At the end of processing time, remove from the cooker, one at a time, and seal immediately. When jars are cold, invert for two or three hours, then examine for leaks.

For the glass-top jars which covers are held in place with a wire ball, these too are only partially sealed before processing, the seal being completed at the end of processing.

WIN INDIANAPOLIS 500 MILE RACE

WIN INDIANAPOLIS 500 MILE RACE

On May 30th, Louis Meyer broke the track record, at 109 miles per hour, driving the entire race without tire trouble of any kind. He is the only driver ever to win the race three times, and has always used Firestone Tires. No tires except Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires could have resisted the terrific heat generated at such high sustained speeds. You can have no greater proof of blowout protection.

Not one of the thirty-three drivers would risk his life on any other tire, for each driver knows that heat is the chief cause of tire failure and blowouts. Firestone cords are soaked in liquid rubber, which saturates and coats every cotton fiber, preventing friction and heat and adding great strength. This is the Firestone patented process of Gum-Dipping, that gives you greatest blowout protection and safety.

Profit by the experience of famous drivers. See your nearest Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Firestone Dealer, and have your car equipped today with Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires.

THE New Firestone STANDARD

Designed and constructed by Firestone skilled tire engineers—a first quality tire built of all first grade materials, embodying the many exclusive Firestone patented construction features. Its exceptional quality and service at these low prices are made possible by large volume production in the world's most efficient tire factories.

Only the Fence
A stranger addressed the farmer's boy across the fence.
"Young man, your corn looks kind o' yellow."
"Yes, that's the kind we planted."
"Don't look as if you would get more than half a crop."
"Don't expect to. The landlord gets the other half."
Then, after a pause, the man said:
"Boy, there isn't much difference between you and a fool."
"No," replied the boy, "only the fence."—Hoard's Dairyman.

Jimson was relating his experiences in India.
"I was taking my usual morning dip when I spotted three gladiators making for me, so I had to swim for dear life!"
"You mean navigators—something like a crocodile" interposed Johnson.
"Well, what are gladiators?"
"Gladiators? Why, they're a sort of flower grown from bulbs."—Stray Stories Magazine.

Crops Suffer From Dryness

Continued hot and dry weather and cold nights have played havoc with the oat crops and farmers fear that if rain does not come soon, these crops will be ruined. The oat crop, as it is, will be a poor one, even if rain falls. The clover and alfalfa crops, however, show signs of being good ones.

Dearest Mother how we miss you in our paths of life each day. And we cannot comprehend it, That you really went away.

But your old armchair is vacant And your face we do not see. Different is the entire household, Changed from what it used to be.

And each day how we will miss you But sweet memories of you, love Will forever give us comfort, Till we meet again, above.

Outstanding enrollees taking the basic course in forty-three Citizens' Military Training Camps thruout the country this summer, will be awarded the Commander-in-Chief's Medal and Citation by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. One of the most prized awards open to first year students at the C. M. T. Camps, the VFW medals and citations will mark, for the ninth successive year, the active interest in and support of the CMTC program by the overseas veterans' organization.

Announcement of the V.F.W. awards is made for the benefit of youths of this vicinity who will attend one of the camps to be conducted from July 1 to September 3 in the nine Corps Areas. The medals and citation are awarded on the basis of military proficiency. Under the direction of Colonel Harry Coope, of Washington, D. C., chairman of the VFW National Committee on Citizens' Military Training, the awards already have been conveyed to the War Department and will be distributed thru military channels to the commanding officers of the 43 basic course camps. At each camp, the commandant will select the outstanding basic course student, who will receive the Commander-in-Chief's Medal and Citation. The VFW awards will be presented to the winners at appropriate presentation ceremonies at the close of each camp period.

The endorsement and support of our organization for the Citizens' Military Training Camp program is directly in line with several of our major purposes.

It is a splendid opportunity for Americanism program which has for its purpose the development of a higher type of citizenship and of patriotic service. In the third place,

Big news from the Supreme Court of the United States and the United State Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Two "far-reaching experiments" of the Roosevelt New Deal are declared unconstitutional.

"The Supreme court in a sweeping decision killed the Guffey coal act; the District of Columbia Court of Appeals held the Resettlement Administration under Professor Tugwell violates the fundamental law of the land."

The decisions set forth that "these major experiments in socialization involve unlawful delegation of powers vested in congress and violation by the federal government of the rights of the states," the Washington dispatch avers.

The resettlement decision affected only that part of the relief activities under Professor Tugwell's administration, leaving undecided the remainder of the $4,800,000,000 voted to the President last year.

Much of the resettlement money has been spent and much more allocated, cancellation of which will raise problems.

At Angels Camp, Calif., 25,000 persons watched the annual Calaveras county frog-jumping contest and saw "Can't Take It" cover a distance of 12 feet 8 inches in three hops. Another frog, raised on the ranch of the late Will Rogers, was second, with 12 feet 2 inches.

Twenty-five thousand human beings watched some frogs hop; not half as many would have gathered to hear Einstein lecture on relativity.

It is suggested that every American be compelled to go to school until twenty-two years of age to cut down the competition for jobs.

It might be simpler to keep everybody in school until sixty and then give everybody a pension of $200 a month. What could be simpler than that?

The average sensible American starts making a living long before he is twenty-two and would do well to continue on that basis.

the VFW supports the CMTC as a valuable adjunct to our program in behalf of an adequate national defense for this country. While the primary purpose of the CMTC is not military, it does provide thousands of American boys and young men with an opportunity to learn the fundamentals of military training and tactics so that, in the event of future emergencies, they will be better prepared to cope with necessity than were the millions of our young citizens drafted or enlisted entirely without preparation, in 1917 and 1918.
